Tips for teachers and school staff

If you're a teacher it's important to know how to tackle bullying in the classroom and playground. Whether a pupil is being bullied or you just want to prevent it from happening, here's our anti-bullying tips for you.

- Bullying is not just something that children and young people go through. It is well researched that bullying causes long term damage to both the person on the receiving end, and those who display bullying behaviour.
- It is not a child's fault if they are bullied. Children should never be told to just ignore it, or to change who they are. It is the children displaying the bullying behaviour that need to change their behaviour and their attitude. This is particularly true if the bullying is targeted at a pupil's gender, sexuality, race, faith, disability or special educational need.
- It is not true that girls just say nasty things about each other and boys just have a punch up and get over it. Avoid gender stereotypes when it comes to tackling bullying. Anyone can be capable of bullying behaviour and it has a serious impact on both boys and girls.
- Children need to be supported to speak out if they or someone they know is being bullied. Make it clear how pupils can report bullying. If a child tells you they are being bullied – take what they say seriously and ask them what they want to happen. Tell them that together you will make it stop and record all your actions. Make sure they know they can call a helpline like Childline any time.
- The only way to stop bullying is to acknowledge that it happens and create a talking culture in your school where any hurtful behaviour is quickly brought out in the open, discussed and dealt with. It is rarely one on one behaviour and so take time to find out who else is involved – and how other pupils can support the person on the receiving end while making it clear to the person or people doing the bullying that it's not acceptable.
- Make sure your Anti-Bullying Policy is up to date, freely accessible and regularly promoted - and that it makes clear how you will respond to bullying as a school community.
- Challenge all forms of offensive or discriminatory language in your school (eg homophobic and transphobic comments, sexist and sexual language, disability, racist and faith targeted comments).
- Take time to talk to pupils about what it feels like to be in your school, whether there are any bullying hot spots – and if there is anything you could do differently to stop bullying.
